

NILS Mariska Jacket: Sleek in the city, slopes, and apres ski

February 25th, 2015 / Tags: Ice Princess , Mountain Armor , product , Sexy on the Slopes , Ski Fashion , Style / Categories: review / No Comments >

The holy grail of activewear for the modern woman is an item that she feels and looks great in when she wears it in the city, on the slopes, and après-ski. We believe NILS has produced the holy grail via its Mariska jacket from the 2015-2016 line. The Mariska jacket made its debut at SIA's SnowShow in January, and it's sure to be a hit next winter. Though it has not yet made its way to the mountains, this jacket has been tested extensively in temperatures fluctuating between 5 and 40 degrees Fahrenheit in Denver, Colorado, and has kept this snowgrrl sleek, warm and comfortable. We believe it's fully suitable for an Ice Princess!

NILS Mariska Jacket in pewter on snowgrrl.com. Cashmere gloves: Neiman Marcus. Jeans: Fade to Blue. Infinity Scarf: Dillard's. Copyright 2015 Snowgrrl.com.

Ice Princess – NILS Mariska Jacket mesh pocket, sleeve cuff, and accessories. Copyright 2015 Snowgrrl.com.

Snowgrrl tried the jacket in Pewter, a luminescent, shimmery grey/silver color.

The jacket evoked comments from friends in the neighborhood about how it looked so galactic and beautiful. The jacket is composed of four-way stretch fabric with 6% spandex and a stretch

